A LABOR DAY MESSAGE

BY W. B. WILSON, Secretary of Labor. This Labor day finds America at the greatest crisis in history. The nation is engaged in the greatest war the world has ever seen, and apon the results of this war will depend the fate of humanity

We have sent a great army abroad to cooperate with the armies of our allies. Our navy is clearing the seas of the German submarines. Our men in blue and kbaki have won glory by many heroic rines. Our men in blue and kbaki have won giory by many neroic deeds; they have helped to inflict upon the foe a crushing defeat which, we hope, may prove the turning point of the war.

But whether it does prove such depends as much upon those who remain at home as upon those who go abroad to fight. We have no fears for our soldiers in France, provided we can keep them well ied, well clothed and properly equipped; they have already shown themselves more than the equal of the kaiser's best transport.

Upon this day, of all days, we must consider seriously the problem before us at home. We must maintain our armies in the field at the top-notch tighting strength, and we must supply the needs of our allies and the starving people of Belgium.

This is a day on which labor must consecrate itself to a great task—the task of winning the war. For this tremendons duty halfway measures will not suffice. There must be absolute loyalty and devotion to the nation's cause—these, I believe, our people have already shown beyond a question. But more than this, there must be a clear understanding of the great need, and a new determination

Maximum production is the good for which we must strive. With every workman giving his atmost strength and will power, we shall attain it. The task will not be easy, nor the effort small; but we have no choice. To save all that we hold dear, we must work, work, work for the boys in France and the allies. One phrase sums it up: "Work as you would fight,"

The coal miners are doing that. They have produced the greatamount of coal in history, despite the heavy loss of men through Many records have been broken in shipbuilding. Great indus-

The workman made a record by driving 4.555 rivets in one day, only a short time afterward, the mark was passed by another who drove 5.900. Now we are told that a workman has driven 6.000 rivets in one day. Such deeds as these show the spirit that animates our people and have served as examples to simulate the whole great body of Americans to nobler tasks.

The clory of it all is that labor has visualized the needs of our armies and our peoples and its own relation to those necessities. Labor accepts that responsibility entinsiastically, toysily. With our self-clast industrial army in America, militarism is documed to defeat.
